

James Watson

James Watson works on a range of bespoke research programmes, surveys and reports for the Economist Intelligence Unit's clients covering a variety of business and management issues, with a special focus on environmental issues and corporate social responsibility. He was the editor of Countdown to Copenhagen, a major report on climate change, and helped chair the 2009 Economist Sustainability Summit. Prior to joining the Economist Intelligence Unit, James spent the past eight years working as a technology journalist and editor in the UK, Singapore and South Africa.
