

2016 Statement on the Prevention of Slavery and Human Trafficking by Siemens Bank GmbH (the "Company")

Introduction

This is the Company's first statement on the prevention of slavery and human trafficking following the introduction of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 (the "Act"). It is made pursuant to section 54 of the Act, with respect to the financial year ending on 30 September 2016.

The Company fully supports the aims of the Act and is committed to operating free from forced labour, slavery and human trafficking. We have a zero tolerance approach to forced labour, slavery and human trafficking in any form, in any part of our business or supply chain.

As part of the worldwide Siemens group of companies, sustainable practices are firmly anchored in our corporate culture, based on our company values of being responsible, excellent and innovative. We apply globally-binding principles that require all employees and managers to behave in an ethical, law-abiding manner. We act responsibly to support economic, environmental and social progress.

Our businesses

All of our employees are required to comply with our Business Conduct Guidelines which commits each of them to respect the personal dignity, and personal rights of every individual, as well as to act with integrity and in accordance with the law.

Our Business Conduct Guidelines require that our employees recognise and apply globally-relevant anti-slavery principles specifically including the International Labour Organisation's Tripartite Declaration of Principles, and its Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work, in particular with respect to the elimination of child labour, abolition of forced labour, prohibition of discrimination, and rights to freedom of association and collective bargaining.

Each employee is required to sign a statement that they have read and understood the Business Conduct Guidelines as part of our recruitment process.

Our supply chain

Our Code of Conduct for Suppliers and Third Party Intermediaries sets out the standards of ethical, lawful and sustainable conduct we expect from our business partners.

We require commitment to our Code of Conduct from our suppliers and third party intermediaries and have made it a core element of our Supplier Management processes.

Our Code of Conduct prohibits the use of forced labour and child labour by our suppliers, requires our suppliers to respect the employment rights of their workers and requires our suppliers to use reasonable efforts to promote compliance with the Code of Conduct amongst their own suppliers.

The principles underlying our Code of Conduct are based on the UN Global Compact relating to human rights, labour standards, environmental protection and anticorruption initiatives. These principles are derived from the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work of the International Labour Organisation and the principles of the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development.

We verify that our suppliers comply with our Code of Conduct through corporate responsibility self-assessments, supplier quality audits with corporate responsibility content and incident-driven inspections. We use a risk-based system, established at the group level, to systematically identify potential risks in our supply chain.

More details of how we operate our supplier management processes to ensure compliance can be found in the Code of Conduct, which can be viewed at <http://siemens.com/about/sustainability/en/core-topics/index.php> (download section).

Our commitment

We will continue to apply a zero tolerance approach to forced labour, slavery and human trafficking in any form, in our business and supply chain.

This statement has been approved by the board of directors of the Company, with respect to the financial year ending on 30 September 2016.
